Regenerative Agriculture professor speaks at Azalea Club

CUTHBERT, GA. – The local Azalea Club hosted Dr. Drew Schiavone, assistant professor of regenerative agriculture at their February 22 club meeting. Dr. Schiavone spoke about the work that is being done by Andrew College students and local volunteers in the Community Garden which is located on the Andrew College campus. Volunteers are able to take home fresh, organically-grown produce for free after working for as little as one hour in the garden. Dr. Schivone said that they are still looking for volunteers to help with the garden which is sponsored by the Regenerative Agriculture Club (RAG). If you are interested in gardening or learning more about gardening, you can call at 229-732-59078 or email drewschivone@andrewcollege.edu.

Photo – The Azalea Club gathered on Feb. 22 in the Turner Dining Hall. Guest speaker, Dr. Drew Schiavone, let the members know about the opportunities and work that is being done with introducing community volunteers to gardening.
