Tiger Camp draws to a close for this summer

CUTHBERT, GA. –Recognizing a need for a summer camp for area children, Andrew College designed a summer camp last year. The camp proved to be a rousing success as parents and children looked forward to 2017 before the 2016 camp was even over.

The 2017 camp just wound to a close on July 14. Children ages 5-12 attended the day camp from 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m., Monday through Friday. Andrew students and staff ran the five-week camp and campers and their families were able to choose the days they wanted to attend.

LaKenya Drayton, assistant dean of student life, served as the camp director. She said, “The community really supported the camp. Each session averaged at least 25 campers in attendance, double the number we had last year. It was a fun summer and we hope to continue the camp next year.”

The camp offered activities such as arts and crafts, sports and educational enrichment. The campers also enjoyed a weekly excursion off campus where they participated in bowling, skating, movies and park activities. The Tiger Camp offered community children the opportunity to make new friends while emphasizing their needs and personal development within a group setting at a low cost.
